

BUSINESS Advisory Boards

Engaging the Business Community in Schools

It takes collaboration among leaders in education, business, and industry to solve today's toughest workforce challenges: unprecedented technological growth, shifting demographics, and increasing customer sophistication.

Business advisory boards can bridge the gap between schools and the business community and create highly effective, innovative solutions that benefit both schools and the workforce they're developing.

The RTI Center for Education Services leverages industry expertise, staff experience, and research insights to offer customized consulting and strategic planning for schools interested in strengthening ties to their local business community through business advisory boards.

Together, these groups of educators, administrators, and business leaders can establish shared goals and objectives that align to local workforce demands, ensuring that students graduate prepared for post-secondary education and work.

School districts around the nation have turned to RTI International to understand best practices, receive individualized needs assessments, and develop frameworks to build highly effective industry partnerships that add value for all stakeholders.

These partnerships can provide students with support and authentic opportunities to learn, apply, and adapt employability skills while affiliated businesses benefit from a well-equipped incoming workforce.

All children deserve a quality education that empowers them to thrive. However, each day educators are faced with new challenges driven by the accelerating pace of change. The need to perceive, understand, and act on emerging trends and practices creates added complexity and can strain capacity. At RTI, we're partnering with educators to change that.
